Nielsen-Ward Residence

Denver, Colorado

The Nielsen-Ward Residence was historic restoration and reconstruction project in downtown Denver focused on the context of the existing historic neighborhood's character. The house, a traditional Denver Square, had no porch, typical for that period of construction and location. UNiT carefully researched the local historic architecture and developed a wrap-around porch that connected the building to the neighborhood, the street and the corner. The architectural solution included period architectural language, detailing and functions. The result became a beautiful addition to the house and neighborhood by completing the corner with a Victorian wrap-around porch.
