Snodgrass Ranch Sedalia, Colorado

Snodgrass Ranch, a 6,500 square foot ranch, set in the foothills of the Rocky Mountains, used an arts and crafts revival design with a full timber frame architectural and structural system.

The project featured several amenities such as large windows, a covered porch with a wrap-around farmers deck, an open interior, vaulted ceilings, and a loft art gallery. The architectural and environmental sustainability of this project created a truly holistic project, integrating site, nature, environment, form and structure. Set into the surrounding hillside, the ranch blended with the landscape, featuring low slung, overhanging porch roofs, indigenous forms, colors and materials. Large windows provided a dramatic view of the Rocky Mountains and created a 100% passive solar solution.

The site of this working horse ranch allowed for an enhanced landscape including terraced walkways, porches, gardens, patios, decks, and native flowers and plants.
